A decorative graphic of a torch with a flame, integrated into a large, stylized, calligraphic letter 'D'.

Dedication

We, the Megaphone staff of 1963, wish to dedicate this year's annual to Miss Carrie Sloan. Her efforts to promote good citizenship in her students, her generous assistance, and her kindness will have a lasting influence on our characters. Miss Sloan has served in our school as both teacher and friend for many years. And so, in grateful acknowledgement of her contributions to Central High School and its spirit, we dedicate this yearbook to her.

RUSSIAN GIRLS VISIT AMERICA

Monday our new president, "Carolyn" Kennedy, told reporters at the press conference that two girls from the Russian embassy are coming to the United States to see the real America.

Officials said that the girls embarked on their journey from Europe on the U.S.S. Witmer, named for the well-known scientist Bob Witmer. The girls were promptly introduced to the ship's captain, Jerry Gober, and to the first mate, Tim Drumright.

The girls said that they were amazed that the ship's head steward, Ernest Mofield, who escorted them to their stateroom, could speak Russian so fluently.

On the last night of their voyage they met not only the renowned fashion designer, Joe Powers, but also some of the well-known Powers' models, Pat Robinett, Shannon Whitley, Carol Hall, and Virginia Cantrell. At dinner Captain Gober planned a very quiet entertainment for the girls. He was fortunate enough to get the well-known Johnson Trio, Gary, Roy, and Robert Johnson, to perform for them.

After the ship docked the next morning, the girls were escorted by Senators Ronnie Etheridge, Judy Bonds, and Eddie George to Hausman Hotel. This hotel in Baltimore, Maryland is owned by the multi-millionairess, Sandra Hausman.

The President's private chauffeur, Charles White, drove the girls to Rauschenberger's Burger Joint which is owned by the famed Berger Queen, Judy Rauschenberger.

The girls had heard the passengers on the ship talking about the new hamburgers and pork and beans that they, the passengers, had been eating. The girls had heard so much about the American dinner that they decided to order one. They delighted in having hotdogs, Rauschenbergers, and Spritos with a delicious helping of Ladd's Pork & Beans, a new product put out by Leslie and Jimmy Ladd Company, Incorporated.

From Rauschenberger's Burger Joint the girls were taken to the International Airport in Washington, D. C. The girls were then cordially greeted by stewardess Wanda Carney. After the plane was in flight, the girls were invited to go forward and meet the pilot, co-pilot, and navigator, Albert Pewitt, Linda Hughes, and Randall Farmer respectively. Three hours later the girls landed at the Nashville Municipal Airport where they were met by Senator Janice Estes and Mayor Max Ragsdale.

In Nashville they planned to see the Parthenon and that great ice hockey team that had beaten their Russian team. The girls especially wanted to see those great hockey players, Carl Wright, Neil Chaffin, Terry Eastland, and their manager, Kenny Parrish. Under Kenny's management the American team had won every game that had been played with the Russian team.

It had been planned that the girls would stay with the Joe Tripp family. He was chosen "Father of the Year" so it seemed logical that they stay with his family in a typically American home. When the girls arrived, Mrs. Tripp wasn't in at the time. However, they were greeted by nine delightful children ranging from ages one to nine years old. And last, but not least, they saw Mr. Tripp who seemed very busy babysitting. The three youngest children were "Tripp-lets."

Later, the girls went to Norman Lamay's Wishy-Washy with Mrs. Tripp to do the family washing. There the girls met the wives of some of the important men they had been reading about in the newspapers. Among these were Mrs. Ann Robinson Hitchcock, Mrs. Linda Hutcherson Jones, Mrs. Norma Miller, Mrs. Phyllis Rittenberry Adcox, Mrs. Carroll Jackson Madden, and Mrs. Helen Fly Clark.

On their way home the girls stopped at the Wise Shopping Center named for the successful actor of screen and stage, Johnny Wise. While at the shopping center they decided to buy some clothes for the warm American climate, so they stopped at Mary Kay's Dress Shoppe owned by Mary Kay Robinson. While they were in the store, Mary Kay told them that there was a new beauty salon open nearby. She thought that since the girls had never been in a beauty salon it would be nice for them to go to one.

When they arrived, there was a large sign out in front saying "Stanley's Salon." This salon is owned and operated by the world's most modernistic hairstylist, Evie Burnett. The girls were most fortunate in seeing Jasper Boner, that well famed hair stylist and manufacturer of Spooles, a new type of hair roller. After the girls' hair was styled, Mr. Boner kindly gave to each of them a bag of Spoolee hair rollers.

When the girls left the beauty salon, they stopped at Pugh's Bakers Shoppe, owned by the kitchen master herself, Judy Pugh.

When they came home, they saw a red truck in the driveway with this sign on its side "Southall Jr. Radio and T.V. Repairs." When they went inside, the girls found that the T.V. was broken and the children were crying because they couldn't see "The Kiddie Hour" narrated by Miss Sally Wallace and Miss Sharon Greer. Jimmy Southall quickly came to the rescue, but unfortunately "The Kiddie Hour" was just going off the air. He did fix it in time, however, for them to see a commercial by the new Louise Armstrong Quaker Oats Company.

On their last night in Nashville the Mayor gave them a going away party. While there they met the great historian, Nancy Sellers, with her consultant, Mary Lee Carroll. When they told of their plans for a trip to Kentucky, the girls decided to tour with them. After saying bye to everyone and exchanging gifts, they left Nashville for Kentucky to see the Derby.

On arriving at the track they went to the stable where they met the highest paid jockey in the country, Billy Dobbins, and his famous horse Macoroni. They also met Dobbin's manager, Ernest Barnes, and his trainer, Sam Larkin. These two were talking to the gambler, Donnie Haynie. They were placing some bets that were taken by Jessie King.

When the girls took their seats in the box, it just so happened that they were next to the Governor of Kentucky, Terry Higgins.

Then a voice rang out, "Horsemen take your posts." It was Janice Ledbetter's voice. Suddenly there was a loud clamorous noise. Inspector Wayne Newcomb had caught Donald Nugent trying to slip Macoroni a mickey so that Donald's horse Spaghetti, who was to be ridden by Jimmy Rodgers, would be a sure winner.

After the spectacular race which was won by Dobbins, the girls attended a tea given by Misses Southern Hospitality themselves, Sandra Prince, Peggy Williams, and Janet Lish. The music for the tea was played by the Tommy Tripp Trio, Steve McClurg, Fred Brand, and David Gibbs, with vocalist, Peggy Lee. The delicious food was served by caterers, Janet Miller, Betty Murphey, and Jackie Murrell.

The girls decided to leave that night by train to go to New York City. On the train the girls met the conductor, Al Wills, who introduced them to Jerry Ward, the engineer.

When the girls arrived in New York, they decided to go to the Brown Derby Club operated by Robert Brown. There they saw those famous stars of CLEOPATRA, Charles Burke and Elva Taylor. Later the girls saw the academy award winner, Barbara Mason, and the playboy, Carl Hoffman.

The girls left and went to Rockefeller Center to see the Rockettes, Mary Dunn, Sandra Hartman, Sandra Myers, Shirley Sawyers, and Marilyn Wells perform.

Finally the girls went to Joe Reasonover's Hula Hoop factory where they met hula hoop testors, Linda Alexander, Merry Christmas, Nancy Edmondson, and Mary Heyboer.

That afternoon the girls went to the ship where a bon voyage party was awaiting them. Karen Unruh gave a speech to the girls on behalf of the group. But all at once a high soprano voice was heard singing, "Bye, Bye Love; Bye, Bye Bobby," over and over again. After seeing the girls' puzzled look, the group tried to explain to them that poor Linda Benson was a victim of a tragic love affair and is still saying bye to Bob.

The Russian girls then boarded their ship to go back to their homeland. After they left, many began to wonder just what they really thought of us as Americans.

Mary Lee Carroll and Nancy Sellers

LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT

Class of '63

We, the Senior Class of Central High School, in the Fear that we will meet an untimely death do ordain and establish this document as our Last Will And Testament.

Article I

To the Principal and Assistant Principal, Mr. Lowe and Mr. Levine respectively, we leave our sincere congratulations on having survived a most trying year.

Article II

To the faculty we leave, . . . regretfully?

Article III

To the Junior Class we leave our astonishing ability to wander the halls during our vacant periods.

Article IV

To the Sophomore Class we leave our desks with their carvings, used chewing gum, and many valuable signatures. Good Luck.

Article V

To the Freshman Class we leave the hope that their graduating class will be larger than ours.

Article VI

To the Seventh and Eighth grades we leave our capacity to get lost in the corridors going to class.
